

June 30, 2009

Got-IT.ie - Expecting Laptop Theft to Continue to Rise with Global Recession.

Filed in Technology on June 30, 2009

Identity theft concerns are nothing new to the News. Our society is becoming more and more technologically advanced, comfortable, and dependent. As a result, the threat of technology-related identity, data, and property theft are on the increase. One of the greatest risks to travelers today is the safety of their personal and business laptops. According to the Dell chr(38) Ponemon Institute, 12,000 laptops are lost in U.S. airports each week, and two-thirds are never returned.

GOT-IT is changing the world of laptop security by offering an easy way to locate your laptop if it's ever lost or stolen.

“On completion of registration, if a system is lost or stolen it can be reported to any GOT-IT Centre, where the status of the system will be updated on the GOT-IT Database as ‘UNDER INVESTIGATION’,” - Elizabeth Grant, Sales Manager at Global Online Tracing Ltd. in Ballybofey, Co. Donegal, Ireland.

If your laptop is located in, or passes through a GOT-IT Centre, the police will be notified and the laptop will be returned to its rightful owner.

Just as LoJack is used to deter car thieves in the US, Global Online Tracing Ltd is looking to eventually deter laptop theft, altogether, with www.Got-IT.ie

Visit <http://www.got-it.ie> for more details